DETECTIVE DOWNEY.

By MRS. CASHEL HOEY

Such was the man, a queer specimen of a strange class, to whom the elegantly dressed lady, on whom he watched at the appointed time, gave an agitated and not very clear account of her loss of a valuable diamond star. He received her communication without comment, but made elaborate notes, and complimented the perturbed lady on her foresight in bringing the four remaining stars for him to see, although, he added, one would have been sufficient for purposes of identification. Mr. Morrison was present at the interview, but took no part in the narrative of the loss of the star, and on its conclusion locked up the jewel case in his safe, at the suggestion of Downey, who inclined to the belief that the robbery was a put up affair, and suggested that it would be well to inquire into the antecedents of Mrs. Morrison's maid. But this theory was impatiently rorned by Mr. Morrison intervening to explain that Louise had not known until too late to dress her mistress for the ball that Mrs. Morrison intended to wear her diamonds. Downey regretfully accepted the conclusion that the case was only one of common "grabbing" after all, for he dearly loved a complication, and was especially partial to affairs in which household treachery was a leading agent. He took his leave, having laid due professional emphasis on the difficulties presented by the case, and went away wishing that the job were of a higher order, that, for instance, Mrs. Morrison —like so many ladies in high and fetching —had stolen her own diamonds, from motives of which it would have been a joy to him to discover and expose. "La femme," in the character of a chimaut in a case of legitimate grievance, interested Mr. Downey only moderately.

In the course of that day Mr. Morrison's message of the previous morning was answered from Melbourne, but not by Mr. Barrington. An agent telegraphed, "Barrington sailed on first." This was startling news, the murder or safety was contrasting. When Mr. Morrison left the bank that afternoon, after he had transacted some very important business, he decided in his wife that he should be detained in town, and betook him in a hansom to a street of very modest pretensions in Pimlico. There he dismissed his cab, and carrying his inseparable black hand bag, he walked on to the far end of the street, knocked at the door of a house, bearing a small brass plate inscribed "Josephus," and was admitted. From that house Mr. Morrison came out only just in time to catch the latest train for Fellside.

"Josephus isn't a bad fellow at all," said Mr. Morrison to his wife, after he had run through the narrative of his proceedings subsequent to the receipt of the startling telegram; "for that sort of man, he's very good indeed. Of course it has to be made worth his while, but then, it is so well worth ours, now that the push has come. The whole thing is disposed of by private contract, the money paid down to-morrow, and nothing touched until all is safe. I really don't see how we could have done better."

"The things cost twice the money," said Mrs. Morrison morbidly.

"More than that, my dear; but the question is who paid for them?" He smile and chuckled; with the smile and the chuckle his sly callousness came out. He had full vileness of the heart, somehow revealed itself. "Cheer up, and don't look so unchuckoly over your pretty things. You will just have as many in the land we're going to,' as the Irish emigrant so sweetly sings, provided we get there."

"What will happen here?"

"I can't pretty well guess, but what need we care? We shall either do it or put it off. If we do it, I don't believe anything will ever be heard of the matter. The bank can stand the racket. It isn't a shaky affair, to be knocked over by a Farquharson; they'll settle behind closed doors, among themselves, and squire it with Barrington and the others. If we don't do it," he paused, and his heavy brows contracted, "well, you and I know about that. We are partners in this game, Jane, but I have more to lose. You will be safe any way."

His wife looked at him for a moment with something of terror and repulsion in her face; but the next she conquered the movement.

After a brief silence he said briskly, "That use, Downey, nothing to say as he thought he already had a clew. It would have been awkward if he had wanted a second look at the diamonds."

"Lest he might have seen the fire stars in the box?"

"No, no. I must be a maff if I couldn't have hidden that from such a duffer as Downey! Because the empty case was in the safe, and the diamonds were securely packed for traveling in this."

He held up with a chuckle a small leather pouch with two loops, made for a belt to be passed through them, dropped it back into his breast pocket, and said with his evil smile:

"What a lot of the ridiculous there always is in everything! The 'U. and D.' is responsible for something funny every by and by for a clew to the history of the 'Walsh' diamonds—they were known by another name once."

"You never told me that story."

"No; but I will, if we pull this through."

On the following day Mrs. Morrison applied herself to a number of household and social duties. The servants were informed that Mr. and Mrs. Morrison were to go abroad for Mr. Morrison's time of leave, and Louise was instructed to pack sundry trunks in advance, and label one for Paris. Mrs. Morrison proposed to replace her by a Frenchwoman. In the afternoon Mrs. Morrison made several calls, during which she spoke of the approaching journey, and said she hardly felt equal to it, but could not allow a day of her husband's precious "leave" to be lost. Her appearance confirmed her words; she was looking ill.

Mr. Morrison returned in high spirits, and before dinner his wife knew that so far all was well, and Mr. Josephus had been as good as his word. While the solemn butler was in the room, Mrs. Morrison suggested to her husband that as an alleviation of the fatigue of the start they should go to the Grosvenor hotel for a day or two and set out from thence. Mr. Morrison replied that she could do so if she liked, although he did not see that she would gain much by it. So this plan was agreed upon and at noon the next day. Mr. Morrison having left home at the usual hour, Mrs. Morrison stepped into her brougham, which was driven away from Queen Ledge for the last time.

The repose of the pleasant villa remained unbroken for some days, but at last a letter, bearing a London postmark, was received by the solemn butler and caused a commotion. The letter was addressed to Mr. Morrison, but it simply instructed the recipient to expect the arrival of a Mr. Josephus, who would pay all the servants on a liberal scale, indicated by Mr. Morrison, and dismiss them, their services being no longer required, settle all local claims and take possession of the house, thenceforth his own property.

It is sufficient to record here that all this took place. Mr. Josephus shut up Queen Ledge for months, with a policeman in charge. But the villa did not long remain unoccupied. Mr. Josephus acquired an eligible tenant; the family, however, is of the "serious" kind, and Queen Ledge is now known as Gilead Grove.

Mr. Treherne duly returned to town and his directorial duties, but the bursting of the storm did not ensue immediately. The signal for that was given by the arrival of Mr. Barrington at the "U. and D." in splendid health and spirits, actuated by an eager desire to get through his business, and full of the happy colonial delusion, so painful by its dispelment, that it would be well should be done quickly is quickly to be done "at home."

Into the details of the discovery there is no need to enter. The "U. and D.," in its present corporate capacity, and in the easier going days when it was a private firm, had been swindled in its business and its bosom as finished a specimen of the "unmitigated viper" kind as ever knew a bank, to the detriment of that institution.

"Thu Way For the Best and Cheapest Monthly Square"
Louisville Times.

A bitter rate war is on between two rival matrimonial agencies in Jeffersonville, and some shocking cuts have already been made in the line of fees. The oldest and best known agency is under the management of John Hause, and another active, hustling concern is operated by Wm. Kratz, a cigar maker at Shier's. Until recently the men have been good friends and have respected each other's rights in the business, but it is not so now, and every day marriages get cheaper and cheaper.

Only an unofficial statement with the Magistrates the figures have been cut down from $7.50 to $3 for a complete matrimonial outfit, license, ceremony and all, including the services of a professional swearer to make oath to the lady's age. Both men now make their regular headquarters in the ferry-dock on this side of the river, and they regard each other with anything but kindly feelings. When the prospective bride, at the end where carriages go on the boat, and watches all suspicious-looking backs, while Mr. Hause looks after the passengers and keeps an eye on the ferry-boat. Although they get cheaper rates than formerly, the runaway couples have a hard time of it between the two men, for each is a schemer from away back and thoroughly understands his business.

A Dig in the Ribs.

If on the right side and lower part of the diaphragm, though playfully meant and harmlessly dealt, it is sure to send profanity from a chappy whose liver is out of order. When that region is sore and congested, jokes seem fiendish. Look at a man's countenance ere you read him under the ribs. If his skin and eyeballs have a sallow tinge, you may infer also that his tongue is furred, his breath apt to be sour, that he has pains not only beneath his ribs, but also under his left shoulder-blade, that his bowels are irregular and his digestion impaired. Instead of making a jocose demonstration on his ribs, recommend him to take, and steadily persist in taking, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the finest antibilious and alterative medicine extant. Incomparable is it also, for dyspepsia, rheumatism, nervousness, kidney trouble, and fever and ague.

ELECTRIC BITTERS.

This remedy is becoming so well known and so popular as to need no special mention. All who have used Electric Bitters sing the same song of praise. WOULD NOT BE PARTED.

Incidents of the Flood in the Alabama River in 1886.
[Detroit Free Press.]

Negroes frequently exhibit a wonderful degree of heroism in times of danger. An instance of this I witnessed in the spring of 1886, when a freshet in the Albany river caused the country each side to be overflowed by water for many miles.

The negroes on the river plantations were the greatest sufferers. Their cabins would be under water almost before they knew that danger threatened them, and hundreds of them were sometimes found huddled together upon some knoll sufficiently elevated to be above. There they often remained two or three days and nights without food, and exposed to soaking rain. Fortunately, the weather was not cold.

Many relief expeditions were sent out from the neighboring towns to rescue them. These consisted of one or more boats, manned by expert oarsmen and oarswomen, and filled with cooked provisions, blankets, etc. One day the news came that the negroes on a certain plantation had refuse upon a corn crib, around which the water was rapidly rising, and so rendering their condition precarious. Two boats started out at once to their assistance. In one of these I went, accompanied by another white man and a negro.

THEY CALLED HIM "MOSES."

An amusing occurrence took place not long after our starting. In the middle of a submerged field, about 100 yards to our right, we saw a wooly black head, with a frightened black face beneath it, projected from the water. We rowed hastily towards it and drew out of the muddy water a negro boy about 8 years old, perfectly naked, and held him up among us.

"Here, Moses," cried one, holding a tin cup with whisky in it to his mouth, "here, take a drink."

"Take a bite of this bread, Moses," cried another, trying to crowd the bread into his mouth.

"No, let Moses have some of this fried bacon. I'll do him the most good," said the negro oarsman.

But Moses shook his head and turned aside from all the food.

"I've schlepped to ye marsters," he said, while his teeth shone and his eyes rolled wildly. "I've schlepped to yer, I hain't sot down in two days, been tryin' to keep my head out'n the watah, an' I'll. I wants, of yer please is to set down."

He was promptly wrapped in a blanket and set down, where for an hour he sat without moving, enjoying the perfect rest of his new position. At the end of that time he began to eat. I draw a veil over his performance in this line. We feared we had rescued him from a watery grave to kill him with fat pork, cornbread and bacon, although the negro oarsman insisted that he had never heard of a "niggah" eating too much. Meeting a returning boat we put Moses in it and sent him to town. I never heard of him again, but nevertheless he survived both his bath and banquet.

We resumed our journey, and just before dark sighted the corn crib, upon which a mass of black humanity clustered like a swarm of bees. A heavy rain was falling, and daylight began beginning to fade away, their condition become most distressing, as they sat in perfect silence watching our approach.

But we did not appreciate their extreme peril until as the boat struck against the frail log house, which was in the water to the edges of the roof, it visibly shook and tottered. The poor creatures began to clamber hurriedly down the boat.

"Stop!" I cried. "The women and children first."

The men obediently resumed their seats. We took in first the children and then the women, getting them all in safely, and were about to push off, feeling the men we would be back as quick as possible or send the first boat we met, when a very old woman seized the corner, and looking anxiously into my face said:

"Marster, ain't you gwine to take my old man?"

"No Auntie," I answered, "the boat is too full now. He must wait till we come back."

The words were hardly out of my mouth when with a sudden spring she was up and on the roof again. It shook as she scrambled on all fours upon it and took her seat by a little, withered old black man, whose hand she seized and held as if she was afraid we would tear her from him.

"Come auntie," I cried "this won't do. We can't take you here and we can't wait any longer."

"Go on marsler," she answered. "I thank yer, and I pray de good Lawd to fetch you all safe home, but I's gwine ter stay her wid me old man. Ef Simon got to get drowned Lyddy gwine to git drowned too. We dun been togedder too long to part now."

And we had to leave her, after throwing them some blankets and a lot of provisions.

As we rowed off in the rain and night a high falsetto voice, tremulous with age came across the waters from the crib where we left the most certainly doomed of our party. It came clear and distinct. First Lyddy's trembling voice and then a chorus of a dozen or more of the deep bass voices of the men:

We're clingin' to de ark,
Take us in, take us in.
Far de watah's deep an' dark,
Take us in, take us in.
Do' de flesh an' sin's yer weak.
Take us in, take us in.
Tis de Lawd we gwinter seek,
Take us in, take us in.
Den, Lawd hold out dy hand,
Take us in, take us in.
Draw de sinnahs to de land,
Take us in, take us in.
We could wait and listen to the weird sounds no longer, but struck our oars into the water and hurried away.

Most fortunately we came upon a boat, bent upon the same errand as ourselves, which went to the crib and saved all the human freight.

Their Rescuers told us afterwards that as they neared the crib the sound that they heard was an old woman's voice singing:

De Lawd is herd our cry,

To this simple hearted old creature divorce courts and equitables were unknown. With her it was "until death do us part."

A STRANGE THING.

Pertinent Questions by a Friend to Prohibition.

It is a strange thing that nearly all the secular papers of our land are in favor of the liquor traffic as at present carried on. There are a few noble exceptions; BUT ONLY A FEW. And when it is remembered that the editors of these papers, with but few exceptions, are men of sober, steady habits, it is wonderfully strange that they are so ready to help such a cause. These men boast of the influence of the press as a powerful factor in moulding and directing public sentiment; and with their eyes open to the enormous evils of this traffic, and with a way by which they can be very much lessened, if not removed, demonstrated by actual test, they aid in increasing these evils in a way they will not and anything else. They aid the cause of whisky to the extent of being unGenerous and unfair, if not unjust, toward a large number of their patrons. Of course they know a large portion of their patrons are anxious to remove this evil from our midst in any right way, but not otherwise. And yet, they not only plead for the saloon, but they publish all the ridiculous and absurd things about prohibition that whisky men want published, and often, if not always, refuse to publish anything that looks in the direction of practical benefits resulting from prohibition. Anything regarding the violation of prohibitory laws is paraded before the public under attractive headings and in a way by no means disparaging to the violators of the law.

Not long since a secular paper published an account of the death of a woman from the bite of a snake. The account was headed in large capitals "Effects of Prohibition." We are told that since a prohibition county, and no whisky could be procured, which we are told is a certain antidote, therefore the woman died, and prohibition is responsible for it. Now I would not by any means insinuate that the editor who published this account knew that the main feature in the case was a baseless fabrication. But it was, for both brandy and alcohol were freely used in the case. So all that flourish of trumpets about the direful effects of prohibition rests upon a falsehood. Well, it seems after all that prohibition does sometimes prohibit. And if prohibition is responsible for the death of this woman, at whose door lies the responsibility of the many thousands who die every year from the effects of the liquor traffic?

In this same paper is often seen accounts of men, crazed by the stuff sold them in the saloon, taking the life of their fellow men. Why not put these in large capitals, "Effects of the liquor traffic?" But whisky men can blow hot or cold as suits them. Here, in the case of the woman referred to it suited them to have prohibition to prohibit, but when it is urged, thus stop the evils that are brought upon the land by drink they tell us it does not prohibit.

But why do the papers take such a course? Is it because they are afraid to say anything that whisky men do not like? If so, they have not half the backbone they would have us believe they have.

Personal Notes About Writers and Artists.

Prof. F. W. Taussig, of Harvard, who explains the system of workmen's compulsory insurance in Germany in the October Forum, has for half a dozen years added a volume or a pamphlet of importance to the list of his writings on economic subjects, which are now fast reaching the proportions of "works."

Emile de Laveleye, the European publicist, says in the October Forum that a hundred years hence, leaving China out of the question, there will be two colossal powers in the world, beside which Germany, England, France, and Italy will be as pigmies—the United States and Russia.

A CRAZY GENIUS.

A Wonderful Machine Constructed by an Inmate of the Asylum—Nothing Like it Ever Was or Ever Will be.
[Binghamtonville New Era.]

A few days since a representative of the New Era visited the asylum and while upon the grounds witnessed the working of a most wonderful and ingenious piece of machinery which was conceived and constructed by an inmate of the institution. It has the appearance of a miniature museum or rather a stage upon which cold and amusing manikins dance and move in time with the working of a mystic machinery. The structure is erected upon parallel bars stretched across the stream which flows at the foot of the gently sloping hill within the enclosure. The stream is dammed in such a manner as to throw the water with considerable force against a wheel which communicates with the machinery above by means of a band. A wooden engine, perfect in detail and proportion, is time operated and kept in continual motion and the casual observer would think that this engine is the motive power which keeps the strange machine with all of its mysterious attachments going. To this little engine small cords and wire cranks are attached and the ludicrous motions of the figures are thus made to conform with the movements of the engine. One man saws wood with his arms, while another makes music with a fiddle to relieve the monotony of his tedious work. To the "lascivious pleasing" of this violin other figures dance and move in perfect time. A woman is rocking her little one to sleep and with each revolution of a certain wheel bends over the infant in her arms in a manner almost too tender to be artificial. A gay gallant gracefully raises his hat to a lady at his side, while a little boy swings as gently to and fro as if the wind were moving the swing.

A very remarkable addition has recently been made to the wonderful machine. A crude music box has been constructed and attached. A cylinder with pegs revolves in a square box and these pegs, as the cylinder rolls around, are placed in such positions as to raise a small hammer which, falling upon nine wire cords, send forth in perfect time and cadence the tender strains of "Home, Sweet Home," to mingle with the music of the water below as it ripples and rushes and breaks upon the rocks.

And over this materialized dream of a disorganized brain the man who made it bends with almost reverential pride and watches with delight the motions of his little children with the loving patience of a father. The virgins could not have nursed the sacred fires with more care than he nurses this wonderful creation of his own. And there seatined above it and guards it more tenderly than old Warner guarded the image which the iron hammer of the cruel duke shattered at a blow. His very existence seems wrapt in his machine; in it he finds the comfort which nothing else could bestow, and there is no ruthless Richard to break his idol into fragments.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Railroad to Jerusalem.
[Danville Breeze.]

A railroad is being built into Jerusalem. While it may be a fairly profitable investment now, yet there would have been vastly more traffic if it had been in operation eighteen hundred years ago. The daily press of that day would have been replete with startling headlines, such as: "A Train Held up by Road Agents Between Jerusalem and Jericho," "Train Derailed at Bethlehem This Morning," "Collision on the J. J. J. & D. R. R." "Masonic Excursion to Lake Gennesaret, Round trip for half a shekel, Children under fifteen half price, Last run of the season." Splendid fishing, Boats free to excursionists, Go and return by daylight, No dust, No smoke, Steel rails and stone ballast, Only first-class road running out of Jerusalem, patronized by Pilot, Gamaliel, Caiphas, Herod and all the elite, Passenger depot three minutes' walk from Herod's gate, Busses running to all the principal hotels to meet every train, Benjamin Levi's full, four-john band will accompany the excursionists and discourse sweet music at every station, Cars enough will be furnished to give all a comfortable seat, Everybody go and have a day of recreation by the shores of the beautiful sheet of water." "Leper ran over at Joppa last night." "Collision at Bethlehem this A. M., Forty persons injured, A drunken switchman shoulders all the blame." "Pontius Pilate and some more of the boys took the Joppa, Jericho, Jerusalem & Damascus road for a two week's sojourn in the Jebel esh Sharky mountains, They will doubtless revel in game and fish during their outing." "Mr. P. Pilate has our thanks for some fine rounds of venison and half a dozen elegant fish—the result of his excursion to the Sharkys. We are not sufficiently versed in piscatorial lore to classify the fish, but from their general appearance and somewhat salty flavor, we judge they must be mackerel from the Dead Sea, or from Zephaniah Tobadonijah's market, corner of Via Dolorosa and Park avenue."

Well-Paid Journalists.

Ballard Smith, who has charge of the Brooklyn department of the New York World, is paid $150 a month.

Julius Chambers, managing editor of the New World, is paid $11,000 a year, under a 3 years' contract with Mr. Pulitzer.

Charles A. Dana is one of the largest stockholders of the Sun; his salary is not less than $25,000 per year. His article on Louisville in speaking merely his entire time in traveling.

Henry Watterson, editor of the Courier-Journal, has a nominal salary of $7,500 a year, but Mr. Haldeman is not fatigued with the man who has made his paper famous.

John A. Cockerill, editor of the New York World, gets $25,000 a year, and he earns every cent of it. There isn't a harder or more effective driver on the American newspaper press.

Chester S. Lord, managing editor of the New York Sun, and one of the highclass newspaper men of America, receives $10,000 a year, and his services to that paper in the last ten years entitle him to double that amount.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. A Western preacher was working the silly business of calling on his congregation to stand up on various propositions. "All who want to go to heaven will rise to their feet," he said. All immediately arose. "Those who want to go to hell will now stand," he next called. No one stood up till a fellow in the rear of the house awakened in a dazed sort of way, said: "Parson, I don't exactly see exactly what you are totin' on, but you shan't stand there by yourself as long as I'm here." This was too much for both preacher and people, and there were no more votes taken that night.

An Infant Convict Pardoned.

Gov. Buckner, October 1st, pardoned Linnville Combs the youngest life convict ever sent to the Penitentiary, at the request of the Kentucky Humane Society. He lived with his mother and stepfather in Breathitt county, and at the command of his stepfather, who promised him a pair of red-top boots, he killed his baby sister with a poker and then tried to burn the body. He was convicted in 1888, at the age of ten years. He was very ignorant, and never heard of God. Being an infant in law, his testimony against the old man was valueless.

JACK GROSS, the ubiquitous politician of this Congressional District, tells the Messenger he is not a candidate for Congress. There is an impression around in the Fourth that Gen. Sam. E. Hill will be a candidate to succeed Hon. A. B. Montgomery, and that impression is growing stronger that if he is a candidate, he will go to Congress. There is no better man for the place in the District than Gen. Hill, and the people will support him.

DR. COLEMAN preached last Sunday from the lesson in the lives of Paul and Nero. The sermon was a complete epitome of the lives of these historic characters and their influence upon the world. The speaker's presentation of parental influence as illustrated in the life and character of Nero's mother, should have been heed by every mother in Hartford. He likened her to Jezebel, Cleopatra and Lucretia Borgia, combining the fiendishness of the first, the intrigue and deception of the second and the invidious hatred of the third. Nero, said the speaker, could have been nothing less than the demon history paints him, with such parental influences thrown around him. As the parent trains the child, so will that child be. This scheming, ambitious, unprincipled woman knew not, in the theft of the crown for her son, she poisoned the dagger-point that this same son ordered to lend death to her. But she saw the true end of her work when she told the executioner sent by her son to take her life, to strike her bosom, for it had nourished a devil. Much may be learned from the life of this woman, who drank the cup of bitterness to its lowest dregs.

NOISY POLITICIANS

Those who are unfamiliar with the appointment power of a congressman and who are not conversant with the methods of the "small fry" politicians and political hangers-on about Washington City would be surprised to spend a while in our nation's capital and observe the hundreds of apparently useless servants of the great Republic. Like a parasite they draw sustenance from the parent stem without so much as giving a single nourishment in return. They are the noisy ones in time of elections and political meetings—the dancing bubbles in the caldron of politics. The National Democrat thus discribes them:

"The most contemptible of all the small cattle of the political field are the little politicians in the Departments. Their positions are of next to no political value. They are for removed from their alleged bosses, where they might possibly have some influence. There is almost no honorable service that they can render their parties except the contribution of money, which may be done without associations and speech making and the adoption of resolutions. When their party is on top they often help to load it with the tumultuous noise of their blatant partisanship. When the other party is on top they are mostly without politics. They have lived in Washington till they have forgotten how to vote. They have no thought beyond the week on their books. We do not believe that those minor positions in Washington are of any material value to any party, though it is, of course, often a convenience to a Congressman to be able to give a place to one of his personal followers. Nor do we blame the clerks for seeking to retain their places under the opposition party. If those clerks were men of means they would not be Department clerks. It is not pleasant or easy finding a new job. But if these gnosophyers and sophs are going to maintain such discreet silence when the opposite party is in power let them have the decency to preserve order when their own party is in power."

HOME INFLUENCE

The average boy is a bundle of contradictions and anomalies. He will promise his mother upon his sacred honor to be early at school, and spend the day hulling green walnuts under the big walnut tree behind the hill where no one can see him, returning home at night to entertain the family with marvelous tales of what the teacher did at school that day. He will promise his parents to be early in bed and be found marauding around over town at the turn of the night. He is the first at breakfast next morning and entertains the delighted family with beautiful visions and dreams he experienced in the earlier part of the night. He will be sick almost unto death, too sick to work or go to school, but a base ball game, dog fight, or a side show is all the medicine he needs to effect a perfect and instantaneous cure. With all the faults that beset the human, street parading after night is the most dangerous, and prolific of the most direful results. Judge DeHaven was strikingly correct when he said that idleness was the direct cause of the majority of the crimes committed. In a charge to a jury he said: "Give a boy at the age of sixteen, a pointer dog and a gun and the devil will have a mortgage on him before nineteen." While this is mainly true to which might be made a few notable exceptions, it does not begin to compare in point of colossal injury to the practice parents have of letting their boys loose upon the streets at night. The boy as well as the girl should be at home under parental influence after night, and his practices upon the streets after the shadows of night have fallen upon the earth would bring the blush of shame to the face of an over indulgent parent. The Madisonville Hustler gives the following sage advice, which if taken will do much good:

"If you want your boys and girls to love home, then make home the pleasantest place on earth to them. It is the duty of all to want to go where there is pleasure and comfort. If your boy loves the street or grocery better than he does his home it is apt to be because the homer is more inviting or pleasant than the latter. Every home should be made a perfect paradise, where naught but love, peace and happiness should dwell. The poor as well as the rich may have this. It is not the stone fronts, frescoed ceiling or Axminster carpets that always appear the most inviting. Pleasant faces, kind words and readiness seeks the happy homes of our country."

Romance and Vulgar Fact.

New York World

There is a touch of ghastly romance in the latest incident of the Hatfield-McCoy feud on the borders of West Virginia and Kentucky, in which a bridegroom and his bride, together with the clergyman who was engaged in wedding them, were shot to death in the midst of the ceremony.

The whole history of the feud, indeed, closely resembles that which Walter Scott glorified with the touch of his romance-wand when he wrote of the bereditary quarrel of the Grants and the MacPhersons. But we of this generation, who have read Scott's tale with romantic sympathy, and who never tire of that other similar story of the Montagues and Capulets which Shakespeare immortalized, have no such sympathy awakened in us by the Hatfield-McCoy butcheries.

The romance with which the elder historians have clothed was a free gift to them from Shakespeare and from Scott. The ancient facts were as vulgar and brutal as their modern analogues. And the same thing is true of the whole history of the chivalric age. Knight-errancy was medieval slugging with a murderous attachment. The joust was a prize-fight and the gallants whom literature has taught us to admire were highwaymen. The founders of the aristocratic houses whose names and titles dazzle our bellos as the candle bewilders the moth, were robbers. Their estates were stolen, their power was that of the bully with a cudgel and the "privilege" which has descended to the dudes of modern drawing-rooms was that of the high-handed wrong-doer.

It is desirable in this day and land of liberty to read history with circumspect openness of eyes and to scrutinize romance very closely indeed if we would avoid perversion of mind. The true chivalry is justice and gentleness. The true title of nobility is work. The glory of manhood is individual worth.

Bought and Sold

(Green River Republican.)

We are informed that certain school trustees were indicted by our last grand jury charged with selling the school for which they were trustees. We are glad the grand jury is getting after this wrong. It has been a practice too long to either directly or indirectly, sell schools. Every dollar of the school money is intended for hiring a teacher and every time a trustee violates the law by indirectly making the teacher pay him a part of it, he ought to be indicted and punished.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years Doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

We hope that the managers of the fair company will next fall set aside one day as school day, and also that on that occasion that there will be a display of school work in floral hall. Something of this kind could be made exceedingly interesting and at the same time be beneficial to the cause of education.

Vigor and Vitality

The blood is purified, enriched, and vitalized, and carries health instead of disease to every organ. The stomach is toned and strengthened, the appetite restored. The kidneys and liver are roused and invigorated. The brain is refreshed, the mind made clear and ready for work. Try it.

JACK GROSS

Visits Owensboro's Big Fair and Tells the Messenger that he is not a Candidate for the Position to Which the People of this District Will Elect General Sam E. Hill.

"Capt. A. J. Gross, of Holt, late United States Marshal for Kentucky, and talked about as a candidate for Congress in the Fourth District, was in the city yesterday enjoying the fair and the society of his friends. Capt. Gross naturally and easily drops into politics upon suitable conversational provocation, and he evinces his knowledge of the science in its practical aspects very forcibly.

When asked about his Congressional aspirations, he replied: "I have none. I do not want any office in the world. There are any number of good men in my district who would make good Congressmen, and I would not make the race against them. If Proctor Knott will run I am for him. We need a man like him in Congress. We are coming into power in 1892, and we need a man of surpassing ability to represent us. Knott is that kind of a man, and would make what he used to be a genuine leader in the House."

"But are there not circumstances under which you might run?"

"Oh, I don't know about that. I suppose there are circumstances under which I would make the race, but I do not think they are likely to arise. I think we are as certain to come into power again in 1892 as I live, and it would please me to be in a position to help our boys as they deserve. Another place that I do not want, either in any of the people, and who knows their wants and how to reach and satisfy them, organize them and enthuse them, is that of member of the national committee. There is where our hope of success lies, and the right men could work wonders. I want you to understand, though, that I do not want any office or position under the sun."

Taylor Mines, Ky

OCTOBER 11, 1889.

EDITOR HERALD. Allow me to ask through the columns of your paper, what has become of the chairman of Hartford District Teachers' Association?

It was understood at the Institute that district meetings should be called by the different presidents, and a permanent organization be established. It has been nearly two months since, and still has been made by the Hartford Chairman; doubtless a great many besides myself are anxious to organize. Other districts have held meetings and are moving off nicely. Now it isn't necessary for me to say anything about the good derived from these associations, as the teachers answer with one voice to this; but what we want is for our chairman to call us together and let us talk about our experiences, and get to work. We can do a grand work in this way if we can ever get an organization.

The teachers of Hartford are as wide awake and as willing to work as any, not because we had no association last year, should we fail this year. Wake up, Mr. President, and let us hear from you.

Railroad Building in Kentucky.

(E. M. B. in Courier-Journal.)

Kentucky has been one of the slowest States to realize the importance of railroads, but since the building of new roads began, it has progressed rapidly. About a quarter of a century ago, the Louisville and Nashville and the Kentucky Central were the only railroad systems in the State. The Cincinnati Southern built with outside capital, and then only after a bitter struggle with our Legislature and with a charter, and another struggle with the people along its line for the right of way was the pioneer in the march of modern railroad progress in Kentucky. The Huntington system had been pushing its way through the mountains of Virginia and West Virginia in this direction, and it finally reached Lexington. Then skipping the distance between Louisville and Lexington, it built what is now called the Western division of the Newport News and Mississippi Valley railroad, which stretches from Louisville to the extreme southwest corner of the State.

With the completion of the Huntington line and the Cincinnati Southern, the railroad fever began to take hold of our own people, and numerous new enterprises were at once projected. But the difficulties did very little else during several sessions but grind out charters for railroads, until it would be safe to say that to-day Kentucky has more miles of railroad on paper than are in operation in all the other States of the Union. But not all these charters with extraordinary privileges were mere schemes for "raising the wind." The failure of the Cumberland and Ohio railroad to complete their projected line, and the consequent financial loss to a number of counties which had voted large sums to its aid, interrupted the good work to a marked degree, but it did not damage the order of the men who were pushing great enterprises. Col. Bennett H. Young and his associates had a very long and weary fight before they completed the Louisville Southern. They met with many reverses and disappointments, but their efforts were at last rewarded with success. To-day, we see in Kentucky many men who have been prominent in politics or various lines of business, devoting their abilities entirely to building railroads. The other day I met in Louisville Col. F. D. Carley, who has recently been put at the head of the Kentucky Union, and he told me he was giving all his time to that enterprise.

I was on the first train which went out over the Owensboro, Falls of Rough and Green River railroad at the opening of that line, last week. The road was built mainly through the energy of one man, Capt. R. S. Triplett, of Owensboro. He, of course, he had plenty of associates, but he was generally foremost, just as, in all other enterprises, there must be a leader. The charter of the road was procured by Hon. Lee. V. Triplett, while he was a member of the Legislature. He owns considerable stock in it, and has been retained as its chief attorney. He very wisely gave up politics several years ago, and will find far more money and happiness in a successful business career.

Monthly Crop Report.

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE, HORTICULTURE AND STATISTICS, FRANKFORT, KY., Oct. 10, 1889.

CORN.

Taking the Assessors' returns as a basis, the total acreage of this crop, for 1888, was 2,292,819; and the total yield was 51,505,546 bushels. In 1889, according to our regular correspondents, the acreage has increased 11 per cent. over 1888, and the increase in condition, as expressed in bushels, is 3½ per cent. These data would make the total acreage in 1889, 2,545,100—an increase of 252,280 acres over 1888—and the total yield in bushels would be 59,307,302, or a total increase in the State, over '88, of 7,761,756 bushels.

The table, for the two years, would stand as follows:

1888.	1889.
Acres, 2,292,819	Acres, 2,545,100.
Bushels, 51,505,546	Bushels, 59,267,302.

The ear is well filled out and perfectly matured; and the crop well out of danger from frost. The blade is large and the yield of fodder will be good.

WHEAT, OATS, &C.

Wheat was a fine crop, but much injured by the rains and continued wet weather that ensued immediately after harvest, which have brought its averages down to about 87 and 88. Other small grain, especially Oats, seem to have shared the same fate. The same may be said of the fruit crop and the complaint of rotting and falling off is general, over almost the entire State.

TOBACCO.

In our report of September 4th, we gave replies from 1,314 farmers, who planted 20,424 acres in tobacco, in 1888; the same farmers have 12,597 acres of that crop, in 1889. We now submit reports from 1,092 farmers, who planted 22,596 acres, in 1888; the same farmers, in 1889, planted 14,190 acres.

It will be seen from these reports, that the acreage of '89 is 62 51-100 per cent. of that of '88. Our report of July 1st, gave it as 68 per cent. of the acreage of '88; and our report of Sept. 4th, placed it at 61¼ per cent. The present report being 62 51-100. It is conclusive, that these three reports, being so nearly the same, can not be far out of the way, unless our correspondents have all systematically erred—which is simply incredible.

We gave condition Sept. 4th, at 70½ compared with '88. At that time about 20 per cent. of the crop had been cut, leaving 80 per cent. in the hill. Since then, the weather has been all that could be desired for its maturing, housing, and curing. The condition as appears by re-ports, has been increased from 70½ to 89. If, for example, A planted 100 acres in '88, and raised 1,000 pounds to the acre, he would have a yield of 100,000 pounds. If in 1889, B planted 62½ acres, and raises 1,000 pounds to the acre, he has 62,500 pounds. But, suppose the condition as applied to pounds should be 20 per cent. less in '89 than in '88, and, instead of making 1,000 pounds to the acre, he makes 800—which would be 20 per cent. less than last year—how would the table stand after taking the 20 per cent. off of the 62½ acres of A's crop of '89?

Here are the figures:

100 acres,	100,000 lbs. 62½ acres, 50,000 lbs

Thus, A would have produced just 50 per cent. in pounds in '89 of what he had raised in '88. These are precisely the facts as shown by our correspondents throughout the tobacco growing counties, and we make the deductions merely to simplify their presentation. Some few sections or neighborhoods have as much acreage as last year; some 75; some 50 per cent; and some less. The crop is not so heavy as it was last year, and this is the reason why we allude to the condition as applying to pounds and not to quality. The crop will be generally bright and very useful for manufacturing purposes, except where it was cut too green and froze in the barn or frosted. It has fair to good body, with small fibre, but is rather narrow in leaf.

The crop is reported by nearly all correspondents to be badly worm-eaten. The frost scare in September caused a good deal to be cut green. The "killing frost" on the night of the 7th and 8th October found the large bulk of the crop safely housed. In order to ascertain the damage by this frost, we telegraphed over the State and submit replies:

Bowling Green—Remnant outstanding killed—perhaps 5 per cent.

Georgetown—No tobacco out here. About 15 per cent. damaged by freezing in barns.

Maysville—Careful inquiry reveals no damage by frost.

Lexington—Damage by frost will not exceed 5 per cent.

Horse Cave—Best information puts damage about 3 per cent.

Mayfield—Damage about 10 per cent.

POTATOES,

Both Sweet and Irish, are a fine crop in all sections of the State—the average being over 100 both as to acreage and condition.

SORGHUM

Makes a better showing than usual, some of the counties reporting both acreage and condition largely over 100—the general average being 109.

GRASSES

Are also reported considerably over 100, and pastures were hardly ever so good.

LIVE STOCK

Of all kinds, as a consequence, are in excellent condition in all parts of the State, excepting only hogs, among which the cholera prevails to a degree more fatal and extensive than has ever before been reported to this Bureau.

HEMP.

In the early part of the season this crop promised very poorly, but the season being well adapted to its growth, we are glad to report a good crop with a fine lint. Farmers profiting by past experience are generally stacking.

The full effect of the frost and freeze can not yet be fully determined, but is very considerable as affecting late crops. Wheat sowing began about Sept. 20th, and has been progressing without interruption. Want of moisture will retard seeding in some sections.

Very respectfully,
CHAS. Y. WILSON,
Commissioner of Agriculture.

Whereas, Our Methodist friends by their kindness and courtesy have furnished us their church in which we have been permitted to worship ever since we had the misfortune to lose ours by fire; and

Whereas, We now have the prospect of being able to occupy our new church house at least at our regular November meeting, therefore

Resolved, That we now take pleasure in advance of tendering them the free use of our house in event they should ever meet with a similar misfortune.

Resolved, That we do most cordially invite our Methodist brethren and sisters, as we do all other good people, to visit us on all occasions when we shall have completed our house and opened it for the public worship of Almighty God.

Resolved, That this preamble and resolutions be published in our county papers, and that a copy be presented to the Methodist pastor by our secretary with the request that he shall read to his church and congregation when publicly assembled for Divine service, and also that a record of this preamble and these resolutions be made on our church book. There is a delegation of kids in town who seem to think it their duty to mimic every daring feat that is accomplished in their knowing. Joe Massie is the Captain of this organization of kids. The parachute leap having been successfully made at our recent Fair, this august body felt that it was their imperative duty to do something like it. So on last Saturday afternoon Capt. Joe Massie notified the kids to meet him at the rear end of L. B. Bean's stable, at which place the daring feat of a parachute leap was to be made. The kids were all present at the appointed hour and cheered Capt. Joe as he put in his appearance. Capt. Joe, to complete the arrangement had little difficulty carrying out plans of canvass for him—one there he proceeded to get himself on top of the stable, which was about 30 feet high. Having arranged all the guy ropes used to spread the parachute, the word was given and the leap was made. But to the utter astonishment of the kids the parachute failed to work as the captain had anticipated and he came to the ground in the twinkling of an eye. Fortunately for the Captain he lit in a mud hole and was not damaged, further than being covered from head to foot with a thick coat of mud. After a thorough mud-scraping, the Captain notified the kids that he would certainly try the daring feat when he had ceased to remember his first experience.

Teachers Meeting at Centertown.

October 12.—In the afternoon a few teachers and several spectators met at the school house pursuant to a call made by the temporary chairman of this district. Although the teachers did not come in abundantly, ye had a very interesting meeting.

The first thing was the election of permanent officers. A. Lee Bennett was elected Chairman and W. Foster, Jr., Secretary. The Chairman made a few opening remarks and was followed by Miss Lizzie Iler, who discussed primary reading. She said that she would tell the members of the first reader class that the one who would read the lesson best could go on, and those who did not read as well, would have to be in a class alone. She thought that by doing this, it made the child study harder and take more interest in the recitations. G. T. Tinsley followed, and said that he graded his primary reading class—that is, when the child mispronounces a word, he counts off five, &c. A Lee Bennett gave his method next. He said that he taught the child a number of words from cards, so that it could read them at sight. He also thought it an excellent plan to teach them the different sounds, and have them to criticise one another. That the child should be interested and taught in a natural way, was the theory given by him. Composition was discussed by Geo. T. Tinsley, Miss Lizzie Iler and Wm. Foster, Jr. They favored teaching it in connection with history and grammar. They thought it a good plan to assign certain subjects in history for the student to write upon, and to supplement the ideas that were to be found in the history, the student should give his own ideas, using original language.

Only a few teachers being present, and Centertown being a good central place, it was agreed that another meeting should be held at that place, Saturday, October 26, with the following programme: 1:30 to 2—How to teach history, Miss Lizzie Iler. 2 to 2:30—How to teach grammar, Geo. T. Tinsley. 2:30 to 3—Pennmanship, Wm. Foster, Jr. 3 to 3:30—How to secure order in the school room, A. Lee Bennett. 3:30 to 3:45—Essay, Miss Myrtie Rowe. All the teachers of the Rockport matrimonial district and the public in general are respectfully invited to be present and take part.

A. Lee Bennett,
Wm. Foster, Jr.,
Secretary. Chairman.

USEFUL AND SUGGESTIVE.

White zephyr articles, if but slightly soiled, are readily cleansed by rubbing with dry flour and hanging out of doors on a clear, breezy day.

For inexpensive bands for curtains, take strips of cretonne with pretty vines or figures and outline them with tinsel; it has the effect of old tapestry work.

Kid Glove Cleaner.—White soap, 4 1-2 drams; hot water, 2 1-2 drams; rub into a paste, and add solution of chlorinated soda, 2 1-2 drams; water of ammonia 30 minims.

Tomato Jelly.—Take ripe tomatoes, peel and squeeze out the juice. To every pint, add half a pound of sugar. Season with white ginger. Boil until stiff.—[Woman's Magazine.

Quince seeds, saved dry, will be found very useful when troubled with tickling in the throat. Place a seed in the mouth, and the moisture will extract the healing qualities.

Do not scrape the inside of frying pans, as after this operation my prescription fried is liable to catch or burn to the pan. If the pan has black inside, rub it with a hard crust of bread, and wash in hot water, mixed with a little soda.

Peach Fritters.—Make a batter of one cupful of flour, one tablespoonful of butter and one egg, and sufficient sweet milk or water to make it of right consistency. Dip the halves of fresh peaches into the batter and drop into boiling lard. Serve with powdered sugar.

Salt dissolved in alcohol is often found a good thing for removing grease spots from cloth. Molasses will remove the grass stains so often found on the summer clothing of children. Rub the molasses in if it were soap on the stained place and then wash the garment in the the ordinary fashion.

Superior Cement for China.—Isinglass 1 ounce; water, 6 ounces; gum mastic, 4 drams; alcohol, 4 fluid drams. Dissolve the isinglass in the water by a gentle heat, add the gum previously dissolved in the spirit, and shake well. The cement must be liquefied previous to using by immersing the container in hot water.

Cleaning Baby's Nails.—Every mother knows how difficult it is to clean the baby's finger-nails. By folding some these paper into a sharp point, and when using it, calling the attention of the baby to something else, this simple task can be easily performed. The magic is so soft that it does not hurt the tender flesh, yet it is sufficiently firm to remove every particle of dirt. Medical Classics.

Have You Enemies?

[Exchange.]

Have you enemies? Go straight on and mind them not. If they block youth path, walk around them, and do your duty regardless of their spite.

A man who has no enemies is not apt to succeed in the battle of life; he is made of that kind of material which is so easily worked that every one has a hand in it.

A sterling character is one who thinks for himself and speaks what he thinks; is sure to have bitter enemies and warm friends, both are necessary to him as fresh air; they keep him alive and active.

A celebrated man; who was surrounded by enemies, used to remark: "They are sparks which, if you do not blow, die out of themselves." If you stop to dispute, you do but as they desire and open the way for more abuse. Let the poor fellow talk.

There will be a mention if you perform your duty, and hundreds who were once alienated from you will acknowledge their error.

Skipped With Ball and Chain.

[Mottoesville Dem.]

Tom Smith, a rather tough colored boy about town, loaded himself with the juice of the forbidden fruit last Saturday evening, and walked into Will Ross' grocery, down by Nisbet's stable, deliberately walked behind the counter and took possession, and began to prepare to wait on customers. Will did not need any clerks, so he asked him to vamoose. This the young man declined to do, and Will at once shoved him out and followed him up with the toe of his boot. Smith procured an old musket, and putting in a charge of four inches of powder and shot, came back to clean up the crowd. Marshal Gower came along and took him in, and locked him in the county jail, where he remained until Monday morning. He was then brought before police judge Hendricks, and fined $30 and costs, and the court ordered him to work the fine out on the streets. He was immediately put to work, but in less than an hour he was left to himself, when he deliberately shouldered the ball and chain that held him, walked out of the community, and has not been heard from since.

Poisoned With Malaria.

Mr. S. D. Price, a native of this State, but now a prominent and influential citizen of Dallas, Texas, writes under date of April 12, 1889: "About three years ago I was living in a malarial district of Georgia, and while there frightful sores broke out all over my body. The poison in my blood was so bad that it ruined my health and prostrated me. I was at length so reduced in health and apparently incurable, after taking large quantities of different medicines prescribed by my physicians, that they, as a last resort, advised me to go to Hot Springs, as it was the only chance of recovery left, and in this they expressed their serious doubts that I would derive any benefit from the trip. I went to Hot Springs, and while there took a thorough course of medicine under the physicians, which seemed to benefit, but did not cure me, for in one month after my return the malady returned, and I immediately began taking S. S. S., which made me permanently well well from [illegible] now."

Obituary.

Died at her son-in-law's, Jas. Staples, one and one-half miles east of Fordsville, in this county, at 5 o'clock A. M., Sunday, September 22, 1889, of flux, Mrs. Mary A. Anderson, in the 71st year of her age. She was born on the farm now owned by Jas. L. Patterson, near Cloverport, and was a daughter of Jacob and Nancy Lieff, old citizens of Breckenridge county. At the age of 22 she married Wm. Anderson, of Hancock county. They had ten children, seven are living, also her husband, in the 50th year of his age. She was the mother of Isham Anderson, so brutally murdered May 31, 1888, an account of which appeared in the local papers and the Police News. At an early age she professed religion and joined the Methodist Church and from that time to her death her life was an example of christian piety. The last few days of her life she devoted to religious service and to giving religious advice and instructions, and directing her funeral and interment.

At 1 o'clock p. m. Monday the 23d her remains were taken to the Isaac Newton graveyard where her funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Henry Crutz, of the United Brethren Church, from the text, "Precious in the sight of the Lord, is the death of his Saints," Psalm CXVI, 15 verse. After the sermon and a citizen address over her remains they were exposed to view for the last time and then laid, as she had requested them to be, by the side of those of her sister, Mrs. Jane Newton, wife of Isaac Newton. The esteem by which this christian lady was reverenced by her church and the people, was manifested by the countless throng that came to attend her funeral and look upon her now lifeless form for the last time, and although many were the young and the gay, they aided with sad faces in the solemnities of her funeral honors. Thus was she beloved in death, this was she honored, and although reared in the humble walks of life, by her christian walk she had from their earliest recollection won in the regard and friendship of all who knew her.

Resolutions of Respect.

WHEREAS, It has pleased our heavenly father to remove from our midst our beloved friend and classmate, Miss Inez Armstrong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong Hale, aged 18 years, therefore

RESOLVED, That while we bow in humble submission to the will of the Divine Superintendent, we feel that there is a vacancy in our Sunday school that cannot be filled, a dear one has been taken from our social gatherings, and the family bereft of one of its cherished members.

RESOLVED, That in her death we realize that God is just and doeth all things well, and while we are left to mourn for her, we sorrow not as those who have no hope. And can only say to the bereft to look up through the misty vale of tears and trust in Him whose will is wise and good.

RESOLVED, That while we feel our Sunday school has been deprived of a studious scholar, the family has lost one of its brightest jewels, yet we believe she is at rest in the beautiful heaven of love, where she assured us so many times that she was going.

RESOLVED, That while we have been associated with her we always found her to be a true friend, loving and dutiful daughter, kind sister, and we take pride in with us no more. We have every assurance that she will find rest for her weary spirit.

RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon record, a copy be furnished the bereaved family, also a copy be presented the Hartford Herald for publication. Owensboro papers please copy.

In Memoriam.

Died at Magan station in this county at 9 o'clock P. M., Sunday, September 29, 1889, of flux, Mrs. Rebecca A. Moffett in the 60th year of her age. She was born near Knottsville, Daviess county, and was a daughter of William and Mahala Adams, old citizens of Daviess county. She was married, February 14, 1849. She leaves her husband and six living children, three sons and three daughters. Her daughters are Mrs. Mary M. Crow, wife of Samuel H. Crow; Mrs. Rebecca A. Moffett, wife of Geo. W. Crow and Mrs. Bettie Wade, wife of E. N. Wade, all living near Fordsville.

At 2 o'clock p. m., Monday after services at her home her remains were taken on to the Miller graveyard on the farm of Jacob Miller near Ellsville, where they were laid by Rev. T. M. Waitree of the Methodist Church South, they were followed to the grave by a large number of that class of Christian ladies of whom it can truthfully be said that she had few if any enemies, and during the years that she had lived at and near the station by her many kind and Christian deeds had won for herself the esteem of all who knew her, which was fully manifested by the many that followed her remains to their last resting place, and their sad faces around her remains as they gave way of them for the last time.

Indigestion

Is not only a distressing complaint, it itself, but, by causing the blood to become depraved and the system enfeebled, is the parent of innumerable maladies. That Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best cure for Indigestion, even when complicated with Liver Complaint, is proved by the following letter from Mrs. Joseph Lake, of Hookasett Centre, Mich.:—

"Liver complaint and indigestion made my life a burden and myself a sore suffering my condition. No appetite began to eat, which would cause distress, so all the food taken, my strength seemed rapidly daily, and after a few months of faithful attention to my prescription, I found myself a well woman, able to attend to all household duties. The change has given me a new lease of life."

A VOICE from Colfax, Iowa, in a letter dated Feb. 10, 1889, says: "Allen's Lung Balsam has done wonders for me. I had a cough for 20 years, and was troubled with hoarseness and sore throat. I have taken many kinds of cough medicine, but never found anything to do me any good until I got a bottle of Allen's Lung Balsam. I have taken two bottles, and my cough is entirely gone, my throat is well, and my voice is clear and strong. I can sing as well as ever. I am 46 years old, and have been a singer for 30 years. I can recommend Allen's Lung Balsam to all singers and speakers as the best throat and lung medicine I ever used." Sold by druggists at 50c. and $1 a bottle. Large size the cheapest.
